TRAINING

In the three hours online training session we will share advice on forming creative collaborations to make a bigger impact with your programming, opportunities and networks you can connect with to help you on this journey and share case studies for inspiration.

The training session will also include a panel featuring BFI Major Seasons, BFI FAN and Cinema For All, so you can ask questions and find out more about the latest offers available for community cinemas. The last part of the training session will include a planning workshop, to help you generate ideas and make possible connections for your collaborative programming project.

You can choose between either of these training dates:

Friday 9 December
10am-1pm

Friday 20 January
1-4pm

As part of Programming Together you will also get access to two pre-recorded mini sessions, to watch in your own time, which provide further training and inspiration for your collaborative programming project. As a part of the pre-recorded sessions you will access:

- Mini sessions on programming
- Case study video

Your collaborative project

For your collaborative programming project - you can run up to two screenings and apply for a bursary of up to £440 to cover your costs. Some examples of what your project could be include: taking a chance on a film you have never shown before, running a focus group with part of your community, or running a special event in collaboration with another organisation or specialist. You will have to submit a timeline about when you are planning to complete your project.

Terms and Conditions

- To take part in Programming Together you must be a volunteer led cinema and already be running screenings.
- As part of the programme, you and your audience must complete a survey (we will provide this for you).
- You must include the BFI logo and Cinema For All logo on any publicity materials.
